Nursing is in crisis. Longstanding nationwide staffing shortages have only grown during the COVID-19 pandemic, straining institutions to the breaking point. But what if facilities were able to connect with clinical experience students already working inside their buildings to refill their talent supply chain? Can gaining unprecedented visibility into students attending your clinical rotations help you uncover which will make the best professional fits and reverse your nursing staff shortage?

Join CastleBranch's VP of Research & Development Nicole Bradford and independent consultant Sabrina Storozuk as they team up with Becker's Hospital Review to lead the informative webinar, Nursing in Crisis: Rebuilding the Talent Supply Chain to Reverse the Nursing Shortage. Discover a new approach to alleviating the incredible strain on the nursing industry by using insights, data, and learnings to identify which students attending your clinical rotations will make great future, long-term employees.
